COURSE DESCRIPTION

Preceptors who have the ability to teach, support, and provide feedback are instrumental in facilitating the transition of the new graduate, students, or new staff nurse to the department.

This course is designed to develop nurses to acquire the knowledge and master the skills of being an effective preceptor.

By the end of this class, the nurse will be able to:

- Identify desirable qualities and attributes of a role-based preceptor.
- Discuss the generation gap and its impact on today's workforce.
- Apply principles of adult learning when precepting new nursing staff.
- Utilize effective communication skills and decision-making process.
- Describe the professional RN preceptor role.
